WHAT IS INTIMATE PARTNER VIOLENCE/DOMESTIC VIOLENCE?

Intimate Partner Violence/Domestic Violence refers to aggression/abuse in relationships — regardless of ethnicity, class, gender, etc. Unhealthy relationship behaviors are sometimes assumed to be normal due to upbringing or when ascribed to mental illness.

WHAT ARE THE SIGNS OF ABUSE?

Name Calling and Put-Downs
Swearing, demeaning, embarrassing, insulting, criticizing, belittling and humiliating

Physical and Verbal Threats
Stalking, yelling, using intimidation and fear, threatening to kick someone out of their home, threatening to harm oneself or others, children or pets

Physical Aggression
Hitting, pushing, choking, kicking, strangling, restraining, biting, forcing someone to engage in sexual activity

Controlling Behaviors
Constantly checking-in, controlling partner’s movements such as going out to see others, withholding necessities such as use of the car, money, and medical care

Jealousy or Paranoia
Irrational, without reason, possessive, accusing partner of cheating or having feelings for someone else

Isolation
Keeping partner away from friends and family, belittling loved ones, keeping partner from communicating with loved ones and/or other support systems

Blame and Manipulation
Does not accept responsibility for behavior, projects feelings on to others, acts as if nothing happened, blames partner for provoking their behavior, uses guilt and shame, uses drugs, alcohol, or mental illness as an excuse for behavior
